Message from the President

“A vision of a champion is one bent over, drenched in sweat, at the point of exhaustion when no one else is looking.” Anson Dorrance

MISO. MISO JR. BULLS. BULLS JR. Holy cow, how confusing is this!?!

At first, very confusing I am sure. Traditionally, the fall season has been a developmental one, with the only game offered the 7 aside season through the Oahu League. The developmental season is meant for small sided games on smaller fields to allow for more touches of the ball by the players to improve their skills, with less focus on winning. Works great if they really do play on shorter playing surfaces. Last year, the men’s league began an 11 aside league in this fall season to provide the “real McCoy” for teams that wanted to participate. Few did at the time, but this year the league has expanded. The games are all at Waipio and everyone seems to be having good matches.

Since players register through US Club Soccer, coaches have greater flexibility in their team’s roster. This allows younger players to mix with older players, if the coaches feel the timing is right. Playing up for some of the players is another big step in their long term development. Just this past week, the U13/14/15 boys were scheduled to compete against the U16 boys. Two U16 girls were present as well. The girls even chose the teams, splitting all of the players equally. What a great sight to see the younger players, boys and girls mixing it up. And, to see a U16 player hoist a U13 on his shoulders after an assist against a U16 keeper. Or to see a U16 “jawing” in the midfield with his U13 counterpart. Final score 1-0 when most would have expected a high scoring match.

Players rise to the occasion. When challenged safely and appropriately, player’s learning curve can be exponential. Even though it is a regular match, it is still developmental. We need to look one or two years down the road while enjoying the first or second half.

“If you don’t love what you do, you won’t do it with much conviction or passion.” Mia Hamm

Family, School and Sports

By Theresa Wong

Balancing family activities, schoolwork, soccer and all of the other activities you want and should do as a high school student, is one of your greatest challenges. Achieving balance is important now in high school and will be even more important when you go to college, especially if you leave Hawaii.

The Club would like to acknowledge those high school students that achieve a semester GPA of at least 3.5 based on a 4.0 GPA scale. We would like to create an honor roll, to be posted in the newsletter. In order to be listed in the honor roll, players can present their semester grades to your team manager who can then forward for publication. Awards for making the honor roll are in the planning process.

Seven Habits of Highly Successful Athletes

Adapted from MWN Sports “Game Plan for Greatness”

1. Understand the relationship between freedom and responsibility. Athletes are the only ones who can make themselves better or worse.
2. The Three “S’s”: Athletes must find the balance between school, sports and social activities. Your social life may need to be sacrificed over education (you need good grades to become or stay eligible in high school or college) or training for your sport.

3. Manage your time. Make lists of what you need to do and what you have accomplished. Keep a calendar. Become efficient. Keep a performance journal on what you worked on in training or on your own time. Sleeping 8 hours a day, eating, class work and sports can account for 112 hours a week. This leaves 56 hours a week (8 hours a day) to do what you otherwise want or need to do. Wasted time comes from your social time, not school or sport.

4. Personal habits. Eat a healthy diet. Stay hydrated all of the time, not just before a match. Avoid alcohol, tobacco and drugs. Sleep well. Habits should be consistent, even on weekends.

5. Athletes should be morning people. Early risers get the most out of their day.

6. Have the right attitude to improve. Go the extra mile. Train on your own with direction from your coaches. Learn to accept criticism to change.

7. Change. Expect, accept and enjoy it.
